FLYING HIGH
Chef James Griffith talks about pressure, pleasure and perfection
Dear Fellow, Colleagues, Ladies and Gentlemen,

I would like to begin my message by congratulating our Abu Dhabi colleagues on their great success at the first Salon Culinaire during Sial Abu Dhabi. A big thank you to Alen Thong and Josephine Cuthbert for all the support.

The first Salon in Abu Dhabi had more competitors than the first one in Dubai, and I am sure the team will be able to double the number next year.

Congratulations to all the competitors – the medal winners as well as non-winners for the great effort shown during the competition. We look forward to seeing some of you in Dubai and in Abu Dhabi Sial 2011. Check out some moments from the event in this issue.

Back in Dubai, we had lots of events towards the end of this year - seafood from Canada, Wild Blueberries from USA, Ostrich Ham and Sausages from Germany, and Dairy Products from USA. Thank you to everyone who supported these educational and informative events.

If you have not booked for the Emirates Salon Culinaire in Dubai for 2011, please do so as soon as possible as most of the live cooking classes are already booked. Also, do not forget that the entry is only confirmed once the payment of the entry fee is received.

To all our corporate members, I would like to let you know that we still have some classes open for naming rights. Please do contact the Emirates Culinary Guild Office or myself for more information.

At this stage, I would like to thank all our supporters who are with us through this difficult market situation, and I hope that all our businesses will recover very soon.

I would also like to wish everyone a Merry Christmas and a very happy, healthy and successful 2011.

Another piece of good news is that we will have an entirely new Gulf Gourmet starting from January. Umaima has added a new member to the team, Jawahar Chodda, who will bring in all his experience and expertise to spruce up the editorial of the magazine. I can’t wait for the new issue.

Thank you to the team of Radisson Blu Hotel, Dubai Deira Creek for hosting our last meeting of the year 2010. Look forward to see you all at our January meeting.

UP IN THE AIR

Gulf Gourmet presents Chef James Griffith, the man responsible for producing over 90,000 daily meals for one of the world’s leading airlines – Emirates - avid biker and traveller.
If there were a top contender for a little known fact about Chef James Griffith, it would be the great escape biking adventure he took with his father. They rode all the way to Greece from the UAE. This and possibly the fact that he enjoys nothing less than a massive challenge to sink his teeth into!

"After ten years of riding Hatta, Kalba, Fujairah and Jebel Hafeet, it got a little boring. The ride to Greece was amazing, since then it seems a little dull riding around here," says Chef James thoughtfully.

Not surprisingly, Chef James is a man who appreciates an experience that redefines what most would consider larger than life. Consider his role with the Emirates Flight Catering Company (EKFC); as Assistant Vice President - Production, he handles the largest throughput capacity airline kitchen in the world. Overseeing a team of 450 kitchen staff and millions of dirhams worth of food products – it would be safe to say, anything less would perhaps be, like he puts it ‘boring’.

Starting Out
Chef James’s zest for the big life could be attributed to his childhood that was spent in several time zones. "I was born in Honolulu, Hawaii USA; but, I grew up in Africa, Jordan, New York, Indonesia, Hong Kong, Bahrain and Switzerland," he says amused.

Having experienced cultures and cuisine so diverse, it was fate that would introduce Chef James to his profession. "My father kicked it off by arranging my management trainee program at the Inter Continental in Bahrain. From that point on, I learned the business and have mainly worked with people that I met during the two years I spent working there."

Hired as a trainee, Chef James worked his way to Commis III and advanced to Commis I Saucier. "I still remember peeling onions for Chef Uwe Micheel, who was my Sous Chef at the time; and I remember not liking peeling onions at all!" Piqued, we asked what his favourite kitchen skills is, "I definitely enjoy preparing sauces. The reducing emulsions and the combinations can be fascinating, and the glass like texture with no visible sediment on a demi glace can only be accomplished through perfection. I believe that every good cook has a bit of the perfectionist in them, without it, it just doesn’t work."

Chef James continued to hone his chef skills as he accepted positions in Luxembourg and Cologne before arriving in Dubai in 1994.

"My tryst with the UAE began when my wife Eliette and I came here on a holiday visiting my father; way back then, he suggested leaving our CVs with him to send around to the hotels, we were working at the Inter Continental Cologne at the time. We got a call from the General Manager Gerhard Hardick to come in for interviews: I started at the old Hilton Beach Hotel Club working with Tarek Mouriess, Andy Cuthbert and Chef Pol. It’s been 17 years since; Tarek, Andy and I are still here with our families!"

Me, Myself & I
Although the demanding floors of his kitchen require his game face at all times, Griffith says: "I am calm, quiet and observant. Work wise, I get things done..."
An avid travel buff and a love for new experiences gets this Hawaiian native going

An avid travel buff and a love for new experiences gets this Hawaiian native going, with no specific favourite cuisine, he likes to go with the flow when out enjoying himself. "I'm very easy going and I don't make a fuss, though I have to say that I won't go back if I didn't like something about a meal. For me, it all depends on the mood and the company and where I am. For celebrations and special occasions here in Dubai, it has to be Reflets Par Pierre Gagnier. From our travels, the stalls in the streets of Jakarta come to mind, so does Chinese from Jimmy's Kitchen in Hong Kong and the Lamb Rack at Gotham in New York. Also, a good shawarma can be heaven at the just the right moment, then there's Sushi, Pizza...I could go on!"

Time is of utmost importance and is the epicentre of Chef James's professional and personal life: "Eilette and my daughters Kiana and Kalea come first on my time off, no question. As Eilette also works, I try and do my share of shuttling the kids to their activities and friends. We try and spend weekends out of Dubai to get away and unwind. We spend as much time as we can together."

On the days he has time for himself, Chef James pursues his love for motor biking and endurance sport. "I used to ride a lot before, now I'm also into American Flag Football, we have an active league here in Dubai."

Working for the Skies
A typical day for Chef James at EKFC averages over 14 hours on days when the facility is charged with additional catering requirements such as events or when there are menu changes and presentations. With a basic target of 90,000 daily meals on a good day, the scale of the operation is a jolt to the nerves.

"The biggest shock when I moved from a restaurant to the facility was going from kilos to tonnes, everything is on a larger scale – from the amount your purchasing, equipment size, to the staff. In a restaurant when it's busy and the kitchen falls behind you can step in and make a difference to bring it all back in line, but in airline catering, if you fall behind, putting your own two hands in to help is like drop of water in the ocean."

It is something to think about, isn’t it? Considering that the EKFC facility operates 24/7, producing an average of 135 menu varieties every day. "Think about it, in a restaurant if an order goes out late, the irate customer can enjoy a complimentary dessert of coffee to smooth the situation over. At EKFC, a late delivery of food for an Emirates A380 bound for Heathrow means dire consequences: the aircraft will lose its departure slot and over 500 customers will arrive late. Then there’s the missed connections, cancelled business meetings, the delayed return flight to Dubai. If that’s not PRESSURE to perform, then I don’t know what is!"

So how does he stay inspired and focussed? "My position today involves so much paper work, figure and fact finding, meetings and planning that I really get my motivation and inspiration by spending time in the kitchens cooking, it really is soothing to stand over the oven and cook something. You are in complete control whether the dish comes out horrible or wonderful it is your creation, with no outside influence or complications. And that is extremely rewarding to me."

In addition to his demanding role with EKFC, Chef Griffith is also the Vice President – PR at the Emirates Culinary Guild. True to his love for challenge, he accepted the role knowing it was a little out of his comfort zone. "Though I have been in Dubai for 18 years I was never really involved with the Guild until a year and a half ago. Having been elected for Public Relations is a challenge and I am still learning as we go along. In all honesty, the events that Uwe M, Andy C and Andy K, Alen and Jo organise are so well known that it makes it quite easy for me."

As part of the efforts to grow the Guild’s circle of influence and presence, Chef James is focussed on improving and evolving the monthly newsletter and investing time and effort to update the Guild’s website and its content.

Life Shapers
"Most of my experiences have shaped my life, professionally and personally. I’m thankful for each of them. Come to think of it, if I wasn’t a chef, I probably would have either become a custom-bike builder, an architect or a caviar taster! One experience that shaped me as a person and later as a chef was when I was working for a friend at his family’s place in a small town in Germany. We did everything by ourselves – slaughtering, making sausages, growing herbs, harvesting cherries, cutting and bailing hay for the livestock, fine dining, banqueting, comfort foods – the whole nine yards. I had to learn a lot in a very short period."

As a result, his approach to food stress... heavily on simple and full natural flavours. A maxim that has seen Emirates’ flight catering offer some of the best cuisine served 26,000 feet above ground. “It just makes sense to use the best ingredients that are prepared in the simplest way, keeping the food light and refreshing. If you want to eat a tomato, then slice it and sprinkle sea salt and crushed black pepper, even a drop of olive oil if desired. There is no need to freeze, dry, reduce, powder, gelatinize, or make it into ice cream!”

We pushed to see if he had anything he felt was a challenge when it comes to a chef’s career. “For me, not really. I think the challenges one faces are life shapers, and most of my experiences have been time or effort based and that has held me in good stead; especially now, with the scale of work I am invested in. However, if there is one negative side I remember, it was working when everyone else was off; Christmas, New Years Eve, festivals and so on; the working hours left little time for the kids. Today, it is a little more flexible, and that’s something I appreciate.”

What the future holds
Chef James is clear and precise when it comes to sharing his insight. To upcoming talent he clears a misconception and stresses on the simple: “Never take a job just for the salary; it is often the lower paying job when you’re starting out that contributes to your future value. Always listen to your Chef, even if you think s/he’s talking complete nonsense! You will learn from it. Most importantly, learn discipline sooner rather than later, it is a lot more painful to learn it later.

As for me, well, I have no definite plans for the future. The current growth plans for the Emirates is so large that EKFC will not cease to be challenged in my lifetime! We opened the largest throughput capacity airline catering facility in the world just three years ago. Today, we’re already working on the planning to double the capacity! Of course, the lure of Dubai itself continues to hold strong for me personally, it is an amazing city – I intend to be here for a while.”

Chef James believes in pushing one’s own boundaries of excellence. He had his first taste of culinary competition when he arrived in Dubai and started with the Hilton. “Competition work and actual restaurant work are so different. To be able to do both very well is a challenge. I have a lot of respect for anyone that works 14-hour days in his or her restaurant and then commits to putting in one’s own time on top of that to prepare and enter a competition. I quote Gerard Hardick on the eve of the competition we were participants for: ‘It is an honour to be participating, a medal would be the icing on the cake.’”
The coveted Emirates Salon Culinaire debuted in Abu Dhabi alongside the highly anticipated and globally renowned food industry event – SIAL. Gulf Gourmet chats with Chef Alan Pedge, Executive Chef, Al Raha Beach Hotel – Abu Dhabi, who was part of the core team of 25 chefs instrumental in bringing the Abu Dhabi leg of the Emirates Salon Culinaire to life.

The capital couldn’t have provided a more fitting platform for the Abu Dhabi leg of the Emirates Salon Culinaire (ESC). The region’s leading chef’s competition debuted in Abu Dhabi in conjunction with SIAL Middle East, the first regional edition of the world’s largest professional food events network. With over 7,000 participants from 76 countries, it was clear that the capital’s growth and expansion within the food and hospitality industry was ready for an additional marketplace to address the growing regional demands and emerging technologies for food.

“Like Gulf Food in Dubai, Abu Dhabi’s intention with SIAL is to provide a worthy alternative as well as recognise the capital’s aggressive growth in terms of infrastructure, hospitality, and its population’s requirements when it comes to food strategy and technology. It was the perfect platform to launch the Emirates Salon Culinaire in Abu Dhabi,” explains Chef Alan Pedge, Executive Chef, Al Raha Beach Hotel – Abu Dhabi.

Clearly, innovation and addressing food evolution was high on the cards as SIAL Middle East introduced the Middle East’s food players to 15 major trends that will shape the future of food products. As chefs and food professionals from the region eagerly took in the exchange of pioneering food innovation and technology, ESC provided a perfect backdrop by hosting some of the best and talented chefs in a competition that encouraged them to push the boundaries of their own creativity and perceived abilities.

Chef Alan is no stranger to the UAE’s dramatic growth, both in terms of economy and most importantly, food. As Chief Marshall of the Emirates Culinary Guild, he plays an active and key role in furthering the cause of all things food across the Emirates. In his opinion: “Innovation is not an independent sport, especially when it comes to food. Platforms...”
like Gulf Food, SIAL and competitions like the Emirates Salon Culinaire play an important role in bringing together food professionals to showcase and share what they have discovered as culinary experts and encouraging each other to excel and innovate further.

The Emirates Salon Culinaire: Abu Dhabi Debut
The Emirates Salon Culinaire has long been established as one of UAE’s premier chef competitions, and began its successful run in conjunction with the annual Gulf Food exhibition in Dubai over 12 years ago.

The Abu Dhabi leg saw 25 of the capital’s chefs come together to organise the event, with over six months of painstaking prep work, before the launch. "If you asked me whether there was a challenge in putting this together, I would have to say, that there was none. It was exhilarating working with the team; 90 per cent of the group were former participants of the earlier competitions, and so getting to work with them and seeing how much of self-propelling each one bought to the entire project, was rewarding," enthused Chef Alan.

The first Abu Dhabi Emirates Salon Culinaire hosted 100 participants, with over 50 winning in 20 classes. Displaying inspiring talent, the inaugural event saw chefs compete in technique, live cooking, pastry making, showpieces, fruit and ice carving rounds.
events

"We had a positive turnout this year. As with all launches of this kind, the event size was smaller compared to the Dubai competition, however, based on this year’s participation, we will definitely see the participation numbers double next year," explains Chef Alan.

Here’s looking at you, 2011
Consider this a snapshot. Currently, the percentage of hotels in the UAE is higher compared to the rest of world. Abu Dhabi alone will witness the launch of no less than 10 major hotels, if not more, over the next 18 months.

The food industry in the UAE is powered by an extensive group of hotels and catering houses, both in terms of people and money. The demand is unmistakable.

"If we take Dubai and Abu Dhabi, a few years ago the destinations were quite different from each other."
events
Dubai’s growth as a city and as a must-visit destination was dynamic, explosive and therefore the demand for events that addressed its requirements flowered equally. As destinations grow, so does the demand for food, entertainment and board. Today, Abu Dhabi is at the very same point – from a touristic, residential, business, and trade standpoint,” he adds.

As the Government and private entities become increasingly attuned to the latest international developments in the food sector, the demand for quality, innovation, safety and creativity will only increase. 2011 will see SIAL return to Abu Dhabi, and with it, the Emirates Salon Culinare will also return, looking for the brightest and talented chefs that are up to the challenge of addressing the dynamic demand of UAE’s passion for cuisine.
When Chef Ruben Rebuffo returned from Durban, South Africa with a medal, little did he know it would whet his appetite for excellence and determination two times over! Gulf Gourmet presents the second runner-up winner at the Unilever Food Solutions Global Chef of the Year 2010 and Head Chef – Pachanga, Hilton Dubai Jumeirah in a candid interview, where he explains how it all happened.

by: Megha Abraham

In order to understand and celebrate Chef Rebuffo’s adventure, it would only be right to introduce this young and passionate chef before we regale you with how he went on to do the UAE proud and place third overall at the Unilever Food Solutions (UFS) Global Chef of the Year Competition for 2010.

It all began at the age of seven in Venezuela, when young Chef Ruben took to the stove with a passion even his mother could not understand. As he steamed and stirred his way to heading his own home’s kitchen, he won the hearts of his family and neighbours as he made pots of hearty soup and served meals that everyone came to love. He was the chef of his home’s kitchen.

“There was never a doubt in my mind, I just knew this was what I wanted to do, and my family supported me completely. I believe that we must do what we love and do it well, this is all I’ve ever wanted to do,” he says.

At 18, Chef Ruben went on to apprentice at L’Entrecote Restaurant in Caracas, Venezuela where he began as a Commis Helper, peeling vegetables. Two years later he would accept his most daunting and challenging role that laid the foundation to his career.

In 2000, he was appointed as third cook at the Four Seasons Hotel, the first to be opened in South America. “Perfection was an understatement here. I was thrown into a very demanding and exacting environment. Nothing short of excellent was accepted. When I think of it now, I’m glad that I had not known any other way, it was tough, but made all the difference to who I am today!”

Working as a banquet and restaurant chef, Chef Ruben clocked an average of 22 hours a day. His seniors expected him to pay the closest attention to outstanding presentation, food quality, and colours. “I think this where I was able to master how time, quality and excellence can be brought together. The competition demanded this and I was glad that my experience here came to my aid.”

From preparing international cuisine for over 500 guests per event to overseeing the dishes served at the restaurant, Rebuffo received his nod of approval and was promoted to First Cook.

Chef Ruben went on to travel and accept positions as Chef de Partie, Senior Chef de Partie and Sous Chef in the USA, Venezuela, Bermuda and the UAE respectively. The 29-year-old chef is presently Head Chef at Pachanga – Hilton Dubai Jumeirah.

Now, back to the Competition…

“When I applied to the UFS Global Chef of the Year, all I knew at the time was that I wanted to win and place well, I didn’t want to come back empty-handed.” His grit and passion is unmistakable. Since the Unilever Global Chef of the Year final showdown in Durban, he has come back wiser and hungry for more.

Considered one of the most prestigious competitions to emerge on the circuit, the UFS Global Chef of the Year is organised by UFS chefs in South Africa, Arabia, the Mashreq and Pakistan. Supported by the Emirates Academy of Hospitality Management, the competition threw open it’s challenging doors to UAE’s best senior chefs (of chef de partie level and above) with a very simple brief—an original recipe with pictures featuring a starter, main and dessert that incorporated UFS products in a novel way.

“It was my dessert that played the central role in Dubai and Durban. I just played around with the format in each competition. However, the spirit of the creation was the same,” he says emphatically.

So what was that special dessert? “For the UAE leg, it was a chocolate soufflé with chilli berries and lemongrass and ginger ice cream. After the results, I remember the judges encouraging me to include this recipe for the Durban competition. I was happy that they liked it.”

Durban Bound

Edgy, committed and innovating on the fly are the trademarks that seem to bubble from Chef Ruben’s effervescent personality. As he talked, one could feel a sense of unrest as he related his Durban adventure.

“The UAE leg of the competition was quite stressful. I mean, think about it, you have three hours to present three types of starters, main and dessert each! Plus, we were doing this single-handedly. You can imagine the amount of focus we needed to have to make sure we plated up creations spectacular enough to be judged for the prize,” he said.
It is with little surprise then, that Durban provided the much-needed twist. The competition rules changed slightly in the final with three hours cooking time and an additional three hours to plate up the final dishes. Chef Ruben, however, completely absorbed in the competition, timed his entire start to plate strategy in three hours!

"I was so engrossed in getting things done that I overlooked the extra time we had; I believe that was what made the difference in my ranking at the competition. Each of us was given a team of junior chefs as help, and an additional three hours to plate up. I only realised the extra time I had after plating my dishes in the original three hours we got for cooking!" he remembers laughing.

In addition to utilising UFS products in his recipe, Chef Ruben realised that a lot of his original plans had to be revised as he created them. And it was fate that would see him change his dessert format at the last minute. "Initially, I wanted to create a chocolate fondant instead of the soufflé for the dessert. When time is closing in and you don’t realise you have the additional time to plate your dish, you can imagine my state of mind – I had create something different!"

As time drew near, the consistency and setting of the fondant wasn’t working. In a flash, Chef Ruben realised that he had to change his approach. "I took the fondant and worked it into a parfait, there was no time and something had to be done. I was facing a powder to liquid ratio crisis when it came to my handling of the UFS products. I had to ensure I was still in the competition."

Judgement
As the judges made their way around the tables, Chef Ruben’s mind was reeling. When his table was approached, the judges were stone-faced, their reactions, unreadable. "I didn’t know what to think; there they were sampling what I had created with nothing much to say. It was stressful."

The feedback wasn’t indicative of where Chef Ruben stood. The critique was straightforward – the starter and main was ok, it was fine. As they dipped into the dessert, the judges noticed and pointedly asked as to why he had changed his intended fondant to a parfait.

"I remember them saying that my starter and main was okay, they nodded once; then after sampling the parfait, they nodded and said, "okay" again. Nothing more. They did that for a few of the other chefs, I didn’t know whether I would place at all. It was not a good feeling. Trust me!"

When his name was announced as one of the top three winners, Chef Ruben could not believe it. After accepting his prize, he finally received what he was after – an in-depth feedback. "When I placed third, it took me completely by surprise. I was elated, but all I could think of was what I had missed. The judges’ then told me that if I had got my dessert format right and made my fondant, I would have placed second overall based on my complete entry. Fondant to Parfait, it was that close."

Still Hungry?
Since the competition, Chef Ruben is back in the Pachanga kitchen at the Hilton Dubai Jumeirah, where he heads a team of seven chefs that create dishes with love. "If you cannot cook with love, the food will not be the same. No matter how perfect your technique or approach," he says.

Although, Pachanga specialises in South and Central American cuisine, it does not stop Chef Ruben from creating what he loves most – simple dishes that incorporate bursts of flavour and are presented beautifully. "As a chef, every restaurant, every hotel, every recipe must be explored and developed. Although, many dishes we create as chefs cannot appear on every menu, we must keep exploring - it is the only way we can truly redefine the way food is discovered, loved, and in the end, shared."

A team of WACS (The World Association of Chef's Societies) approved international Judges will adjudicate at all classes of the competition: using WACS-approved methods, criteria and documents www.worldchefs.org

After each judging session, the judges will hold a debriefing session at which each competitor attending may learn something of the thinking behind the judges’ decision.

Competitors will not be competing against each other: rather, they will be striving to reach the best possible standard. The judges will then apportion marks that accord with their perception of the standard reached. The competitor will then receive an award commensurate with his/her points tally for the class.

In theory, therefore, everyone in a particular class could be awarded a gold medal. Conversely, it could be possible that no awards at all are made.
